

IT IS SURPRISING THAT SO MANY MEN

are willing to wear cotton-mixed clothes when they can get all wool; but it's more surprising that anybody is willing to pay all-wool prices for cotton.

You know that wool is very high priced; all-wool clothes cost more than part cotton; if you want all-wool clothes, you must pay the price. You understand that. But don't pay the price, and not get the stuff.

You want all-wool clothes and we're sure of it, they wear so much better, keep shape better and have so much more style than the cotton-adulterated goods, that you'll find them economical, even at their higher price.

We have Hart, Schaffner & Marx all-wool clothes to show you; you'll never see any better.

Nobody can doubt the rapacity of the famous Washington county black bass. Swallowing live rabbits is one of their favorite pastimes. Nor can there be any doubt as to the fine flavor which a rabbit, fed on the spring verdure of Texas imparts to Texas unrivaled black bass. The Potomac black bass have some local reputation in the vicinity of Washington, but they feed for the most part on small frogs and

GOOD BYE S.S. SIERRA

TALK OF AMERICAN-HAWAIIAN
BUYING HER FOR THIS RUN—
MONSTER PASSENGER LIST.

The Oceanic steamship Sierra, Captain Houdlette, sailed from the Oceanic wharf this forenoon for San Francisco, probably never again to come to this port, unless, perhaps, there is something in the rumor that the American-Hawaiian Steamship Company is going to buy her to place on the San Francisco-Honolulu run.

A large crowd, larger than usual, went to the wharf to see the Sierra go; everybody realized, it seemed, that it might be good-bye forever to the good Sierra, as far as Honolulu is concerned. It was the same old "alo-ha steamship" crowd, almost, that was wont to say farewell to the Australia and has been saying an revoir to the Alameda for years. The Hawaiian band played patriotic, sentimental and pretty near being a record-breaker for senger list, the vessel was late in leaving her wharf, the tug Intrepid having hold of her a long time before she was ready to be strained into the stream.

The outgoing passenger list comes pretty near being a record-breaker for an Oceanic boat from this port. After all, many who had booked did not go, but their places were quickly filled by those only too anxious to get away.

In the steerage the remarkably small number of ten was taken. This is on account of the fact that the Sierra does not carry women in the steerage and since they are the Portuguese who are most anxious to get away and they do not travel much unless in families, the half-a-score single men and men going up to prepare the way, perhaps, for their families, have the steerage to themselves.

A glance through the passenger list elsewhere published, having been revised up to the time of the Sierra's departure, will reveal the names of many school teachers going away on vacation on the Coast.

The Sierra takes up a fair cargo, including over 1,000 tons of sugar, about 50 tons of rice, 2,000 cases of canned pineapples, 700 cases of fresh fruit, 4,000 bunches of bananas and much other island stuff.

At the office of the agency and aboard the Sierra nothing is known of the vessel returning here. The Sierra's crew, in case they do not get another chance, today said good-bye to Honolulu.

AMERICAN DUCHESS.

DUCHESS OF MARLBOROUGH.

THE FOUNDING OF JAPANESE FLEET

ANGLO SAXON LAID FOUNDATION
OF MODERN FLEET NOW OWNED BY LAND OF NIPPON.

One hundred and fifty years before the United States of America sprang into splendid existence a forefather of John Adams, the second president of the Republic, had sailed around the globe to the little known Japanese islands, then the limit of the world, and founded the modern Japanese navy. The story of how the Kentish sailor was made a god by the grateful islanders, of how they erected a great temple to his honor in which prayers are said to this day, and of how everything heart could wish was pressed upon him, with the one exception—the thing he desired—liberty to return to his home, his wife and his children, reads as one of the unequalled romances of medieval days.

The figure of Adams is one of the most pathetic in history for not even the wildest guess of that day would foresee the brilliant result that sprang from his work. For forty years the sailor lived on the great hill where the temple of Hemimura erected in his honor, now stands, above the great docks of Yokosuka, gazing day by day over the Pacific for the sail that never came. Without one, in the whole nation that spoke his language, without family, country or friend, he lived out his life, striving to teach the savage islanders the rudiments of ship-building and navigation as it was then understood. And when he died at last the Japanese continued the study he started them in, and over three centuries later, when their day of trial came and the battleships of Russia stood arrayed against them in the sea of Japan, the little islanders proved that they had well remembered the lessons that Will Adams had spent his life in demonstrating three hundred dead years before.

To Ronald McDonald of Oregon, who crossed to the then closed land of Nippon six years before Commodore Perry opened that country to the world, he belongs the pioneer credit of the first crossing of the Pacific and the linking of the newer races of the west with that people who remain in the cradle of the human race.

Eva Emery Dye, the Oregon author has told the story of McDonald's adventures and properly preserved the life story of this splendid crusader. And the proposal that at the coming Alaska-Yukon-Pacific Exposition which will be held at Seattle in 1909 to exploit the Northwest and the countries of the Pacific, the memory of McDonald shall be honored with a statue, has met with acclaim everywhere.

Because of this American interest, and America's commercial connection with Japan, those who will have the directing of this portion of the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific Exposition will take good care that the stories of the earliest connections between the Anglo-Saxon and the Oriental people are properly exploited and preserved.

McDonald is usually spoken of as being the first white trader who reached Japan. The story of Adams who really deserves the credit turning, the tale of the roguish sailor who became a god, whose descendant gave two rulers to the greatest Republic the world has ever known, has not the general circulation it deserves.

To the people of the United States the story of William Adams ought to be of intense interest for anachronistic as it may seem to speak of the United States in the year of grace 1600 William Adams was, if not by ancestry, at least by posterity, as good an American as ever sailed the seas. For from his immediate family were descended John Adams, second president of the United States and John Quincy Adams, sixth president of the United States, and others of that distinguished Massachusetts line. The story of William Adams, the first, is as follows:

WILL ADAMS.

On the hill of Hemimura, looking out across the sea
O'er the docks of Yokosuka, and the warships sailing free,
Midst the Shinto pennons streaming
Lies Will Adams, still a-dreaming,
Of the busy port of London, and the Kentish wood and lea.
He forgets the fleet he builded and the decks that once he trod,
That his grave's afar from England and his pall is alien sod,
That the incense sticks are burning And the praying wheels a-turning
To the name of William Adams, Kentish sailorman—and god.

So he drowns till the screaming of the sirens once again
Calls him back to where beneath him, like mailed Barons of the main
Ride the warships, while the rattle Of Dai Nippon's seaward battle
Rings and mingles through his dream- ing, like a distant song's refrain.
For when the great gray battle-ships roll down upon the foe,
Or Togo's lean torpedo boats charge shoreward through the snow
When the giant shells are crashing, And the league-long searchlights flashing,
Then Will Adams sees the triumph of his toil of long ago.

MR. A. E. W. MASON.

On April 12, 1600, a Dutch ship piloted by William Adams, a Kentish seaman of good family but roving disposition, reached Japan. At that time it was part of Japanese religion, patriotism and statecraft to keep all foreigners out of the country. The Dutch traders, however, were permitted to build a trading factory at Firando. For this concession the traders were compelled to hand over to the chief or Teyoon their best seaman and boat builder. Adams probably the best, in any case, but the ship, its captain and its seamen were Dutch and the man who was handed over was to be a life prisoner. This fact probably led the captain to sacrifice to the Teyoon's command, the one foreigner on board.

JURY FOR WALLACH

The trial of J. Lor Wallach on a charge of a charge of perjury in connection with alleged fraudulent registration came up at 10 o'clock this morning in Judge Lindsay's court. M. F. Prosser, the First Assistant Attorney General, will try the case for the Territory.

The diminutive defendant was represented by Thompson and Clements. M. F. Prosser of the attorney general's department, assisted by Criminologist Chester Doyle, conducted the prosecution.

The following jury was selected this morning: Bruce Cartwright Jr., William Carey, Irwin Spalding, C. H. Belina, Otto Schulling, J. H. O'Neill, R. W. Padmore, M. R. Houghtaling, Antonio L. Perry, James Young and J. J. Clement.

The selection of these jurors exhausted the panel so a new venire was issued, consisting of the following names: Hugh Downie, W. T. Schmidt, E. R. Biven, C. R. Roe, A. V. Peters, J. H. Defries, F. Tevers, H. Koelling, M. S. Hammond, W. M. Minton, L. J. Feary, J. L. Whitmore.

The court adjourned until 10 a. m. tomorrow.

THE PARTY ON MAUI

Acting Governor Atkinson received the following Wireless message today: Atkinson, Honolulu.

CONKLING.

WEEK ENDERS.

If you will look over the society records in the Honolulu papers you will frequently find reference to the doings of leaders at social functions spending the week end at Haleiwa. They go, not only once, but many times because the change from Honolulu life and conditions are entirely changed. There's something about this resort that is different from any other place on the islands and its popularity is increasing. In the matter of enjoyment you may have anything you like for the golf links and the tennis courts are pleasantly situated and the hotel attractions are unsurpassed. If you are thinking about going down for a day or two you might ring up St. Clair Bldg. good, manager.
